Farmers Ask Data On Crop Varieties

Proper Choice of Seed Held First Requisite

Farmers, with this year's harvest out of the way, are looking toward 1950 and seeding time, county extension agents report.

Many farmers are asking county extension agents about new varieties of crops.

As a rule, the county agent's answer to farmers is this: "Before buying seed of any new variety it is good business to be sure it is recommended and suited to the locality in which you live. The new variety should be at least as good, or better, than varieties you have been growing."

Reliable seed dealers and their agents can usually be depended upon to offer you only proved new varieties of grain, he says. But each fall, reports are received of less responsible salesmen and mail order advertisements selling new varieties, often at high prices, that may not be as good as our common varieties.

Most experiment stations test in their plots most all the new grain varieties developed by plant breeders in the north central states and Canada that offer promise of being adapted. By consulting county extension agents about a new variety of seed, farmers can find out if it has been tested and is recommended for your area.

Blue Egg Shells May Be Answer for Egg Dealers

Blue shell eggs may be the answer for some daring poultrymen who are tired of collecting the same old brown and white ones every day, and who would like to experiment with another color.

The trick is turned regularly by some chickens at Cornell university. Dr. J. H. Bruckner, head of the poultry husbandry department, says the color actually varies in light shades of both green and blue depending on how much brown pigment is present.

Bovine 'Litter'

Here are four of "Brownie's" rare bovine quintuplet "litter" which survived on the farm of Ralph Tauro, at Hillsdale, New York. The calves are shown with their mother, Ralph and his son Michael. Such a birth happens in the bovine world about as rarely as it does among humans.

Hens Not Properly Fed Won't Lay Many Eggs

"Where does the feed go?" That is the question most poultrymen ask, says Kermit Schlamb, North Dakota assistant poultry husbandman. It is a recognized fact, he points out, that unless a hen is fed properly she will eat, but won't lay many eggs.

He stated that "a flock of 100 five-pound hens requires about 125 pounds of well-balanced feed per week just to keep in good shape.

NEW BOOKS IN THE COUNTY LIBRARY

The following are a few of the new books which have recently been added to the county library:

Center Aisle, by Claudia Holland. A novel by a Virginia author with its setting in Portsmouth, Va.

Gentian Hill, by Elizabeth Goudge - England in the early period of the nineteenth century is the setting for this novel of love, adventure and faith in life and people.

The King's Cavalier, by Samuel Shellabarger. An exciting novel set in the reign of Francis I of France and his mother, power behind the throne. It is a fast-moving story of adventure and gallant deeds in days of trouble and rebellion.

The World Almanac, 1950. This is an up-to-date and completely indexed almanac.

My Son and Heir, by Isabella Holt. This is an absorbing family story of Joanna and Gunnar Wicklund, and their son, Alex.

Happily Ever After, by Hartzell Spence. In this the author presents a story of a man and wife who decided that farming alone would bring them to the kind of happiness for which they had been searching. A humorous story of how they bought a thirty room Virginia mansion, seven hundred acres of misery, and tackled the problems of happiness.

Weep For My Brother, by Clifford Dowdey. Clifford Dowdey tells the unforgettable story of a man who became, literally, his brother's keeper.

Ruth, by Irving Fineman. This is a superb Biblical novel of the story of Ruth.

This I Remember, by Eleanor Roosevelt.

A Guide to Confident Living, by Norman Vincent Peale.

Family Fortunes, by Owen Davenport.

Farmer Hikes Spud Yield By Using Clover Manure

Using red clover as a green manure crop enabled a Duluth, Minn., farmer to beat his county's potato yield by as much as 200 bushels per acre.

Leon Massey harvests between 390 and 400 bushels of potatoes per acre as compared to a county average of 120 bushels. He does it by turning over one year's growth of clover every fourth year in his crop rotation.

PMA Announcement

As applications for paying Appomattox farmers for 1949 conservation practices were being pushed through the local PMA office, Bennett Harding, PMA County Chairman, reported that many farmers are already signing up under the 1950 Agricultural Conservation program.

He said that the first order of business these days is to get last year's program behind and checks in the hands of farmers. In this respect, he quoted the PMA State Office as "expecting 10 per cent of Virginia's farmers' 1949 ACP checks to be in the mail by mid-month."

However, Mr. Harding reminded farmers of the importance of making 1950 conservation plans now, so that the PMA county office may take steps to effect early deliveries of required lime and fertilizer materials. He pointed out that the Appomattox PMA County Committee has established a "priority date" of March 1 by which time farmers must have executed work sheets showing the practices they intend to carry out under the 1950 Agricultural Conservation Program.

Farmers wanting assistance in planning conservation practices for the coming year should consult their PMA community committeeman or call at the county office.
